Jennifer Tempesta's practice focuses on patent litigation in both district courts and at the International Trade Commission. Clients rely on Ms. Tempesta's significant experience with all phases of district court litigation in various jurisdictions, including discovery, Markman hearings, summary judgment, and trial. Notably, Ms. Tempesta recently tried four cases at the International Trade Commission in less than two years.

Ms. Tempesta is also well-versed in appellate practice and has argued at the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. She also handles post-grant proceedings, patent prosecution, opinions and client counseling. Clients seek Ms. Tempesta's advice in a number of fields, including pharmaceuticals, chemicals and various advanced technologies.
